

Preserve America Stewards

Preserve America Stewards is a designation program that recognizes stewardship programs that have demonstrated a successful use of volunteer time and commitment in order to help care for our historic heritage. Through such programs, historic and archaeological site stewards in many parts of the country keep a watchful eye on important and remote resources and alert authorities when such sites are threatened by thoughtless vandalism or other threats. Other volunteers serve as interpretive docents, assist with repairs, and help out with research activities. Still others keep historic places inviting and free of trash, maintain the landscaping that makes them attractive and welcoming to visitors, and otherwise offer their time and talent to help preserve and present our heritage.

Potential Preserve America Stewards programs apply to be recognized at the national level using an application form and guidance materials available at the Preserve America Web site (www.preserveamerica.gov). Government entities (federal, tribal, state, and local), non-profit organizations, and businesses are eligible to apply. The Advisory Council on Historic Preservation and the Bureau of Land Management, Department of the Interior administer the program as part of the interagency Preserve America program.

Preserve America Stewards receive a designation letter and certificate of recognition signed by First Lady Michelle Obama. To be designated, applicants must demonstrate that their programs:

- Provide individual volunteers with opportunities to contribute in direct and tangible ways to the preservation, protection, and promotion of historic properties;
- Address an otherwise unfilled need in heritage preservation through the use of volunteer efforts; and
- Demonstrate creative use of volunteer assistance, addressing issues such as youth involvement, engagement with the outdoors, cultural diversity, volunteer training, public education, and public/private partnerships.

In addition to the certificate and letter from the White House, benefits of recognition and designation as a Preserve America Steward include the following:

- Listing in an online directory on the Preserve America Web site, with links to their own Web sites and information for potentially interested volunteers about getting involved.
- Use of the Preserve America logo in public outreach and promotional activities;
- Enhanced access to existing technical assistance resources that may be helpful in the development, management, and ongoing support of a local volunteer stewardship program, and;
- Publicity in the Preserve America E-Newsletter.
